J. A. Godfrey, O.B.E., M.A., F.C.A.

Mr. John Godfrey retired in April, having combined the duties of Deputy Director-General and Finance Secretary, for the last twenty-one years, after joining the RNIB in 1947 as its Chief Accountant.

As Finance Secretary, he assumed overall responsibility for the RNIB's financial affairs and investments, and redesigned the presentation of the accounts for the Annual Reports.

The tenfold increase in legacy revenue to the Institute can be largely attributed to Mr. Godfrey's perception and concentration on this source of income.

The Institute takes this opportunity of thanking him for his invaluable contribution to its work and expresses its hope that his well-earned retirement will be long and rewarding.

The Royal National Institute for the Blind

87th Report

The following pages summarise the progress and achievements of the RNIB during the past year. I think that all those who have worked for and supported the RNIB during the year are to be congratulated on what has been done. Nevertheless, however much we progress, however much we expand, however much we spend, we can never do enough; and the future will undoubtedly bring formidable tasks and problems to the RNIB. Man's inventiveness and technical progress will afford us opportunities to offer more and more help to the blind; but it will also greatly challenge our foresight and financial resources. Last year we spent nearly £3 million, but with continuing inflation and growing opportunity for supplying more efficient and complex help to the blind, it is more than certain that in a few years' time we shall be spending much more.

One important demand which is increasing, and which we have still not yet fully met, is that for Talking Books. The production of both cassettes and machines is going ahead as fast as possible to meet this demand and eliminate the present waiting list and we hope to achieve this by the end of the year, after which we shall hope to meet new applications on demand. This particular service, bearing in mind that 65% of British blind are over 65, is of great importance to those who go blind later in life and are unlikely to be able to learn braille.

Another facility for the blind which we believe to be of great importance to their mobility and to which we are giving a high priority, is the training and introduction of the long cane. The National Mobility Centre for the training of instructors in the long cane has been moved to larger premises, extra instructional staff have been recruited, and we hope to be able to meet the demand from Local Authorities and other organisations for the training of their instructors.

We have also during the past year, thanks to the co-operation of the Scottish Braille Press, considerably increased our braille production. This in itself presents considerable storage problems, and we have acquired new premises in Great Portland Street for that purpose.

There are very many other activities outlined in the Report which, though I have not space to mention them, are of great importance, and many of them have progressed or changed in a variety of ways.

An unusual and difficult problem came to the RNIB this year through the protracted postal strike. We are entirely dependent on the postal service for the regular delivery of braille periodicals, particularly the Radio Times, and the collection and distribution of Talking Book cassettes. During the strike hundreds of voluntary workers joined with the staff of the RNIB in ensuring by improvised methods, the regular delivery of a high proportion of periodicals and cassettes. It was a considerable achievement, done at the sacrifice of much spare time and leisure. On behalf of the RNIB and the blind, I would like to express our sincere thanks and congratulations to all those who helped.

The blind, to an ever increasing extent, are engaging in more advanced forms of education and participating in more complex and technical careers. The help which we must afford to them in this field will steadily become wider, more demanding and more expensive. We must, at all costs, encourage and meet this widening path towards higher opportunity.

I would like to thank the staff of the RNIB for their excellent and devoted work during the year. I would also like to thank our thousands of voluntary workers without whom the RNIB would be crippled. Finally, may I thank those who have so generously helped us financially, and take this opportunity of saying that their generosity is likely to be tested even more strongly in the years ahead.

HEAD
Chairman

The Institute's Finances

On the following pages there are many instances of how the Institute helps the blind community in this country. It is not surprising to learn that the very heavy expenditure of the previous year has again been exceeded in the year just ended. We have spent on our services for the blind no less than £2,815,000, an increase over the previous year of £158,000 and this represents an annual expenditure of just over £24 for each registered blind person in the country.

It is indeed a sobering thought that charities like ourselves who serve the special needs of sections of the community, have to suffer the ravages of inflation in exactly the same way as the rest of us who are blessed with our full faculties. We endeavour to cut out all items of expenditure which could possibly be described as unnecessary, but despite the most careful scrutiny which we exercise over all our budgets, it is already becoming increasingly difficult to keep costs even within the high levels of 12 months ago, and it is quite certain that many further increases are on the way.

As will be seen from the figures on the opposite page had it not been for the generosity of our well-wishers, and in particular of those who have bequeathed us legacies in their Wills, we should not have been able to absorb these increasing costs and still maintain our services, let alone expand them. But for these generous bequests and donations we should now be drawing on our reserves and the continuance of our services on the present scale would be imperilled.

In making special mention of the sums which we have received from legacies it is interesting to note that for the first time these have totalled more than £900,000 in one year and this magnificent achievement is a fine testimony to the work of Mr. John Godfrey, O.B.E., M.A., F.C.A., first of all as Chief Accountant and then Finance Secretary of the Institute for nearly 25 years until his retirement earlier this year. In large measure the financial stability of the Institute in these present difficult times is due to his wise guidance of the Institute's affairs and we are indeed grateful to him.

In spite of the difficulties of raising adequate funds at the present time, it is our firm belief that the necessary funds must be found so that we shall not just continue our services to the blind at their present level, but that they shall be steadily expanded over the years so as to bring ever more comfort and assistance to those whom we strive to serve.

In order to do this we must ask our friends, not only to continue with their generosity but, whenever possible, to be even more beneficent than they have been in the past. In particular we would once again emphasize the importance to the Institute of bequests by way of legacies and residue of Estates when making their Wills, and we do hope that all those friends who are able to do so will give this aspect of their testamentary dispositions their most sympathetic consideration. The Institute and indeed the whole blind community will be most grateful to them.

You gave us the BOOST to reach our target of £1,530,000

A Year of Expansion

THE FIRST year of the new decade has seen a further marked expansion of the services which the RNIB has provided for more than a hundred years.

The successes of medical science have extended the life-cycle of man so that, at one end of the scale, we are faced with an increasing number of older people going blind, whilst at the other we find that, though a lesser number of children are being born blind, more of them have additional handicaps.

This situation has posed the problem of providing increased training and educational facilities for the young, and more residential and holiday accommodation for the elderly.

The Institute has faced up to this problem with a programme of building and training techniques to meet the constantly increasing pressures on its resources.

As a voluntary organisation, we are proud of the confidence reposed in us by the State and the Local Authorities for many aspects of our welfare work, and we are equally aware and grateful for the continued loyal support of the vast numbers of voluntary workers who continue their endeavours on our behalf.

In serving the blind, of all ages, the underlying themes of patience, skill, education and training have always been uppermost in our thoughts, and the achievements of the blind in a highly competitive world are our reward for the contribution we strive to make for their welfare.

Independence through Mobility

We referred in last year's report, to developments in mobility training with the Long Cane technique at the National Mobility Centre in Birmingham.

Such has been the interest engendered and the success of the work at the Centre, that the National Mobility Centre has now moved to larger and more practical premises where extra training staff have been engaged to meet the growing demand from Local Authorities and Schools for the Blind, to provide instructors in this new technique.

The techniques of descending a staircase using the long cane, under the watchful eye of a student instructor.

The Centre will also be involved, in co-operation with St. Dunstan's, with the preliminary evaluation of the Binaural Sensor—an adapted spectacle frame fitted with sonic devices.

A film depicting the work of the Centre has been produced for distribution to Local Authorities and other organisations concerned with blind welfare, as a vehicle for encouraging further recruits to train as mobility officers for the blind.

We are in no doubt as to the advantages the long cane has brought to many blind people; in several cases it has meant the difference between sitting at home in a state of self-commiseration, and moving into the outside world with a feeling of independence and self-confidence.

At the RNIB Rehabilitation Centres, Training Establishments and Colleges, it is given high priority in the curriculum.

A sighted instructor under training uses the long cane to establish his position before using a zebra crossing.

Bus shelters are used as sound shadows in long cane training. The traffic noise is diminished sufficiently to establish one's position.

A New Way of Life

Every year, some 2,000 men and women of working age lose their sight and are immediately faced with the problem of re-shaping their lives.

The onset of blindness is in itself a physical and mental shock, and calls for prompt action to reassure those so handicapped that a full and active life is not just a matter of "wishful thinking".

Manor House, Torquay, is by now, a by-word in the field of rehabilitating those newly blind men and women who, quite often to their own surprise and gratification, are now pursuing trades which they imagined would be beyond their wildest expectations.

Some three hundred people pass through the portals of Manor House each year, fortified by the training, inspiration and teaching skills imparted to them by the staff during their three month stay.

They do indeed start a new life in what is, to them, a new world, and it is a rewarding thought that since their foundation over thirty years ago, the Rehabilitation Centres of the RNIB have equipped many thousands of blind people, deprived of one sense, to face a five-sensed and highly competitive world, with courage and confidence.

A Purpose-Built Centre

As part of its expansion programme, the RNIB is transferring its rehabilitation centre for older people, from Bridgnorth in Shropshire to a new purpose-built establishment, delightfully set in five acres, on the outskirts of Nottingham.

For those who go blind later in life, and they represent some two thirds of Britain's blind population, the Institute is minded of its need to instill a feeling of being wanted, and at its Centre, older men and women are taught how to cope, despite their blindness, with the many daily tasks which will face them when they return to their own homes.

The new Centre, Clifton Spinney, bigger and better equipped than its fore-runner, has the additional advantage of being more accessible for those who wish to visit their blind relatives or friends during their rehabilitation.

It is hoped that the services offered at Clifton Spinney will attract increasing support from Local Authorities for this ever growing section of our community.

Employment for the Blind

It is only through the specialised education and training facilities which the RNIB has developed over many years, that those blind people who pass through our schools, colleges and training centres may take their places in the fields of professional, technical, administrative and clerical employment.

In a period when competition is stiffer and unemployment presents a sterner picture, we take pride in our placement record.

The Institute is constantly on the look-out for new areas of employment for blind people and we have had recent success in opening up new jobs for the blind in operating photo-copying and multilithographic machines.

With the co-operation of Hawker Siddeley Dynamics Limited we placed a former Worcester College boy, John Fullwood, for a vocational period in the Dynamics Department of that firm, where he was given a problem to solve on the trajectory of a guided weapon in flight.

John had previously obtained nine "O" Levels, four "A" Levels and is currently taking a B.Sc. Combined Honours degree course in mathematics.

His ambition is to be employed as a mathematician in industry.

In a summing-up of the experiment, Hawker Siddeley say that: "There is no doubt that an unsighted graduate could become a very useful member of a theoretical study team".

This pioneer project has been extremely valuable in introducing a blind student into an industrial environment; in revealing problems arising from his temporary employment in a scientific department; in stimulating consideration of ways in which these problems can be solved and in thus ultimately assisting such a student to acquire professional status.

The once simple things of daily life, can soon be tackled after training. Ironing and making a pot of tea will soon be mastered by these blind ladies at Clifton Spinney.

In the Housewifery Section at Clifton Spinney, two blind people competently tackle the washing up. Two kitchens provide training with gas or electric appliances.

As a result of the experience of John Fullwood, it is hoped other firms will be encouraged to offer to blind students similar opportunities for employment in the fields of mathematics, science and technology, and perhaps thereby to improve career prospects of graduates in these disciplines.

This project also emphasises what is increasingly realised by those concerned with the education, training and employment of the visually handicapped, that it is of vital importance to preserve a fully open mind regarding their career possibilities and to use every opportunity of arranging feasibility projects.

Technical Research

Much of the development in aids for the blind is the result of research carried out in the Institute's own Technical Department. From a comparatively simple device like a telephone number memoriser, to the complications of a specialised Data Processing Terminal, the department applies its skills with equal endeavour to lessen the problems of the blind.

Educational apparatus on which we have worked in recent years, in support of the Nuffield Project into Maths and Science Teaching, now includes an electronic thermometer with a range of -5 to $+105^{\circ}\text{C}$ measuring to within the accuracy of 1% of full scale, which is used for school science experiments requiring a temperature readout. There is also a digital counter measuring to 1/100 second, used in mathematical and science calculations such as one might meet in velocity and acceleration experiments. Also a chemical balance measuring to an accuracy of a tenth of a gram. A digital chemical balance reading to 1/100 gram has also been adapted for Worcester and Chorleywood Colleges.

Similarly introduced during the last year is the electronic physiotherapy timer to enable a physiotherapist to progress treatment times, with intermediate and full time audible signals.

Currently under construction, is the development of a Data Processing Terminal for use at Chorleywood College whereby a blind operator can exchange data to an on-line computer at Hatfield College of Technology and receive input and output data in braille embossed form. Originally in concept as an educational device, this may have application in business terminal situations as an aid to employment.

Mobility is a vital part of rehabilitation. A trainee is leaving a local shop after making her purchases.

One device which became available over the past year was a crossword puzzle which, to our knowledge, is the smallest and most compact device of this nature available for the blind in any country.

In the field of mobility, a search for a folding version of the long cane continues and during 1970, the National Mobility Centre examined a large range of prototypes and production folding canes, designed and made at a number of centres in this country and overseas. The design developed at the RNIB was selected for further trial and at present, the National Mobility Centre is evaluating two-piece and four-piece prototypes, to see whether these meet the wide range of user requirements.

The Manuscript Department

With the increasing numbers of blind people in training and employment there is a constantly growing need for a wide variety of braille material.

The Students' Library and Manuscript Department plays its part in the education of both the older and younger blind student in two major ways; firstly by the provision of books for study and secondly by transcribing examination papers into braille.

This year the Library has issued 18,862 volumes to its readers, who are to be found all over the world, although naturally, priority is given to readers in the United Kingdom. During the year, 1,634 braille volumes were added to stock, the great majority of these having been transcribed by voluntary braillists working in their own homes; we owe a tremendous debt to these transcribers, particularly those who tackle difficult mathematical, scientific and linguistic material.

The transcription of examination papers into braille is a very responsible and demanding task which has to be undertaken by the Manuscript Department's small staff of braillists. The examinations range from the Certificate of Secondary Education to final examinations for university degrees and they are of increasing length and complexity so that it is all the more important in many cases for the students to have the papers in braille.

The Library also contributes to the training of blind people by providing braille to meet various needs as occasion demands. During the past year a large quantity of braille used in the training of computer programmers has been supplied. Telephone lists are provided for blind switch-board operators taking up new posts. Established professional blind people also need help, particularly when taking up new posts, or as recently happened in the case of two lawyers, when they were transferred to another Government department.

Servicing the Blind Musicians

With the comparatively recent advent of sophisticated non-literary applications of braille, it can easily be forgotten that, despite too drastic re-organisations, braille music is probably the first such application. Thus the work of providing for the needs of both professional and amateur musicians is taken for granted, even in the Music Department.

Efforts are made to take account of changing tastes, as well as adding to standard repertoire, as the presence of major works by Schoenberg, Shostakovich and Bach among recent published output will indicate. The monthly publication of three Pops ensures the representation of those seeking to be "with it".

Teachers' needs have been met with an exhaustive Sight-Reading course, in addition to the continuous coverage of the piano and theoretical requirements of the Associated Board of the Royal Schools of Music.

The general increase in music candidates at O and A levels is clearly represented in the demand for these examination papers. Most of these papers, as well as others, needed by the major music colleges, for their blind students are produced by our personal transcription service.

By means of this service, unusual demands, which would pose great problems for teachers and church musicians, are met by giving them the means of memorising and are more than holding their own. The service also provides numerous chorus parts in addition to those published and is able to meet other non-professional needs.

Two particular developments of significance have been the stimulating Refresher Course last year at Chorleywood College, for blind music teachers as well as those teaching music to the blind, and the establishment of a musicians' Volunteer Tape Service.

In response to requests, an appeal was made in the musical press, and some twenty qualified sighted musicians have offered to record music which their blind counterparts need to hear. Our musicians are beginning to realise the value of this service, though it is not yet being used to full advantage.

THE ROYAL VISIT TO CONDOVER

It was a day to remember for the children at Condover Hall and Pathways, when a real princess came to see them.

Her Royal Highness, Princess Margaret, Countess of Snowdon, who is President of the Sunshine Homes and Schools for Blind Children, visited the school on October 13th to officially open the new extensions.

These comprise a series of flats each accommodating eight children and their house mothers, and are linked by covered walkways and lifts so that there is easy inter-communication between all flats and the main buildings of the Hall itself.

Thus the long-established "family" pattern at Condover Hall has become a physical reality.

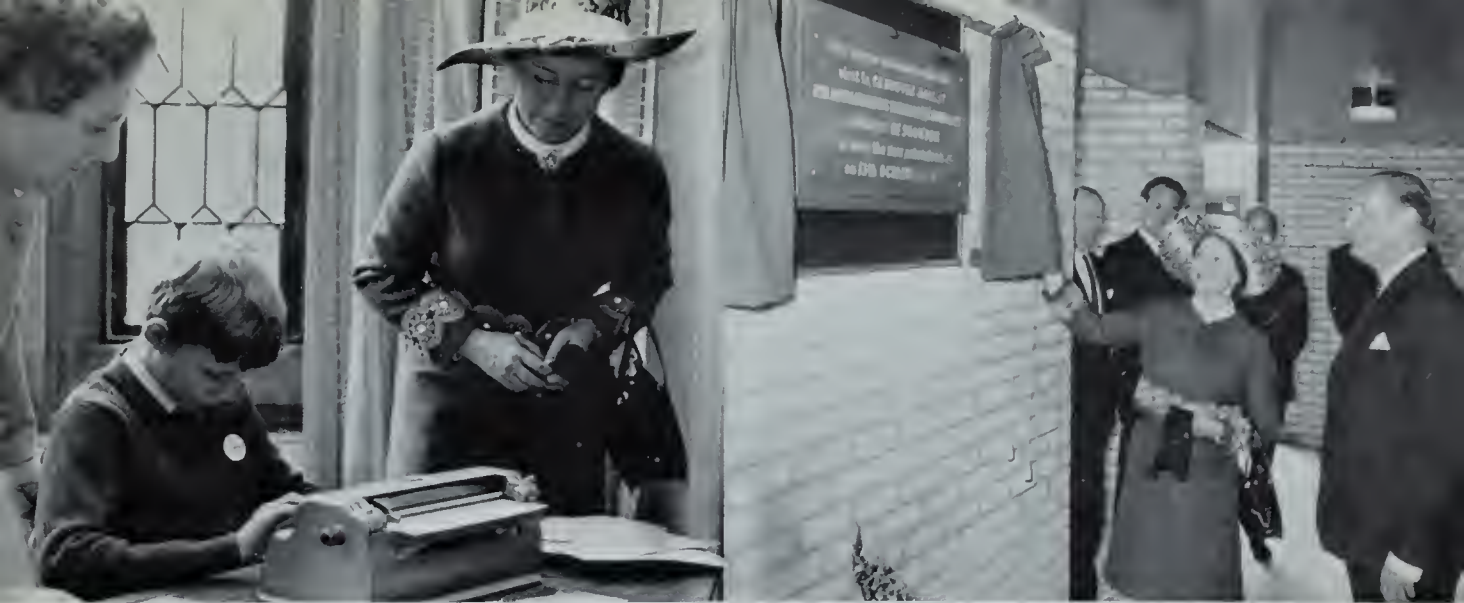

To Mr. S. O. Myers, O.B.E., who has recently retired after twenty-three years as Principal of Condover, the visit was a "golden day for Condover" and a fitting climax to his unstinting contribution to the education of blind children with additional handicaps.

Princess Margaret accepts the gift of a table lamp.

The Princess, accompanied by Mr. Myers, Principal of Condover, toured the new extensions. The covered walk-way can be seen in the background, joining the new buildings to Condover Hall.

After visiting several of the classrooms to see the children at their work, Princess Margaret unveiled a plaque to commemorate her visit.

The Talking Book Service

A landmark has been reached during the year by our Sound Recording Department, by completing the transfer of all existing machines to accept the small cassette.

This situation has been reached a year ahead of schedule by stepping up the issue of adapters for the older type machine.

Simultaneously, work continued to make further inroads on the waiting list for the service, applications for which are received at the rate of some 150 a week.

With almost 27,000 members of the British Talking Book Service which is administered by the RNIB in co-operation with St. Dunstan's, the libraries at Wembley and Bolton are involved in handling the issue and return of cassettes to members to the colossal figure of over a million movements a year.

The advent of the Open University attracted some 15 blind applicants and each of them are served with sound tapes of all the relevant print material for the Humanities Foundation Course.

Steps are being taken to help with the employment of the blind, by recording talks by professional people for vocational guidance purposes and by providing tapes of extracts from professional journals for groups of professional blind people.

Apparatus and Games

In the catalogue of apparatus and games issued by the RNIB, there are over 300 pieces of equipment, many of them devised, designed and produced in the Institute and others specially made to our requirements, but all of them geared to making life that little bit easier for the blind or to bring pleasure in their leisure hours.

Many of the items are free to the blind and those which are priced, all carry a substantial discount for blind people.

Several new items are introduced each year and amongst the newcomers to the present catalogue are, a one-pint measuring jug with braille calibrations, and a single-line guide for braille Dymo tape—an invaluable help in the hundreds of uses for which this tape has been utilised since its introduction, e.g. rose-tree markers, record indexing etc.

An innovation for braillists is Brailon plastic sheet which has been found to be of more durable nature than manilla paper where permanent records are required and it also has the added advantage of making the process of braille much quieter.

The development of the Sales and Purchasing sections of the RNIB owes a significant debt to Mr. Percy Ratcliffe, M.B.E. who retired from the Institute last year, after serving over forty-eight years, the last twenty-one as Manager of these two departments.

His lifetime's work for the Institute was, and is, a way of life and he will be remembered not only for his managerial abilities but as a man who carried his work into his private life, understanding, helping and caring for the blind at all times. We wish him a long and happy retirement.

New Holiday Hotels for the Blind

In view of the ever-increasing number of applications received for holidays for the Blind, the Institute is especially pleased that through a bequest made to the Liverpool Workshops and Birkenhead Society for the Blind, it has been enabled to offer additional holiday accommodation at the newly-acquired Howard Hotel, Llandudno, North Wales.

The Hotel is administered by the RNIB and accommodates forty-five guests in double and single rooms. It is situated on the Front within easy reach of shops, railway station and all the resort's amenities. Bearing in mind the number of elderly people visiting the Hotel, it is of particular importance to know that a lift is available to all floors.

Llandudno is ideally situated, and arrangements will be made for guests to participate in a variety of tours to surrounding beauty spots, both on the coast and further inland. The Hotel's mini-bus will be available to transport guests to and from the station and for short tours during their stay.

Earl Mountbatten of Burma records the introduction to his "Life and Times" under the supervision of the Chief Sound Recording Engineer in one of our Talking Book Studios.

The Howard Hotel, Llandudno, has recently been opened to provide holiday accommodation for forty-five blind people and their sighted guides.

Bannow, St. Leonards-on-Sea, which was originally given to the RNIB around 1920, has been one of the Institute's most popular Holiday Homes, but the steep hill and lack of adequate staff accommodation, are causing concern. In addition, over recent years, a considerable building programme in the area has been carried out, and this has spoiled the attractiveness of the site.

It has therefore, been decided to seek more suitable premises in the area and an Hotel in Eastbourne has now been acquired which will open in 1972. This Hotel will accommodate sixty-five or more guests, at least twenty more than can at present be taken at Bannow. The new Hotel has all modern amenities and is ideally situated, with double and single rooms, and a lift to all floors.

Homes for the Deaf-Blind

During the past year it has become evident that the demand for accommodation for elderly deaf-blind men and women is declining. It is, however, true to say that the majority of applications received are for elderly Deaf-Blind with additional handicaps, and some of our existing premises were proving unsuitable for this type of case. As a result of this, it has been decided to reduce the accommodation available for elderly Deaf-Blind by closing Wilton Grange, the Institute's Home in West Kirby, Cheshire, as this has proved to be the least suitable Home for this type of case, having most of its accommodation on the first floor in large rooms, and where it is not possible to install a lift. At the same time, in order to provide sufficient ground floor single room accommodation, an extension is to be added to the existing Home at Burnham-on-Sea, Somerset.

The total accommodation for the Deaf-Blind at Tate House, Harrogate, and the Kathleen Chambers Home at Burnham-on-Sea, in due course will then provide adequate places for elderly, and often infirm, deaf-blind men and women, one Home being in the northern and the other in the southern half of the country.

Braille Production

During the year, 529,300 copies of magazines and periodicals have been printed and despatched of which the Braille "Radio Times", issued free to over 5,000 readers each week, and the monthly Announcements Supplement with a free circulation of nearly 4,000 copies, account for more than half our production.

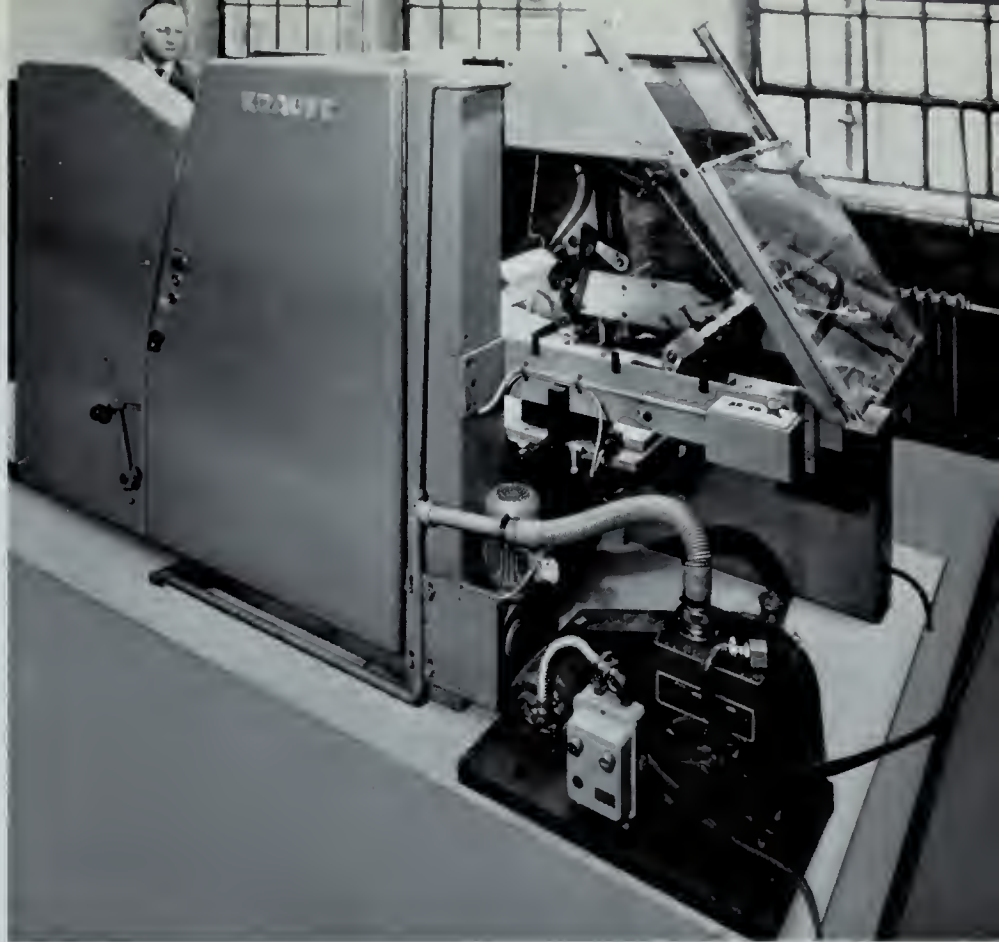

Braille readers are kept in touch with current affairs by the twice weekly Braille Mail and the weekly News Summary which contains a summary of the week's news, designed for the deaf-blind.

Some 200 new titles appeared in the total of the 96,189 books and pamphlets we published, amongst which were included a book of crossword puzzles, science fiction, volumes in the Penguin Modern Poets series, the Jimmy Young Cook Book, computer programming manuals with very esoteric titles, volumes in the Penguin History of Music, and old favourites like the football and cricket fixtures and B.B.C. language course booklets.

Above all, during this period, we produced a series of Decimal Currency Board booklets culminating in the free householder's booklet, "Your Guide to Decimal Money"—of which 8,500 copies of the braille edition were run off, complete with a special plastic pocket-size version of the shoppers' conversion table—a record for a single braille edition.

A steady increase in the number of books translated by computer and automatically transcribed (14 titles during the year as against 9 the previous year), has been complemented by an increase in the number of periodicals now regularly computer-translated (5 at present), and we hope to convert at the rate of one a month, all the magazines suitable for handling by the computer programme.

Some periodicals are too complicated to be dealt with as yet by our existing computer transcription programme. The more routine transcription jobs the computer can handle, the greater our manual transcribing strength will be for dealing with the more complex material involved in production of school texts and computer programming manuals, etc.

Our sub-contracting arrangement with the Scottish Braille Press continues to contribute to the overall increase in production. During the year the Scottish Braille Press produced for us 32 titles, against 25 the previous year.

Mention should be made of the new braille production machine we have installed—a Krause automatic printing press for book and magazine production which will contribute to much higher production.

Work on vacuum-formed plastic maps steadily continues, and we have in preparation a new physical globe of the world. The new maps and the globe, will like their predecessors, go to customers throughout the world, as well as playing their part in the education of blind children.

Moon Type for the Elderly Blind

A record number of pages of Moon (set by hand) were produced during the year, and 1,349,000 sheets of Moon were embossed.

With the weekly Moon Newspaper, goes a weekly summary of cricket and football results (quite a few deaf-blind people are pools addicts). The newspaper is free and is equivalent to the Braille News Summary i.e. designed for the deaf-blind.

During the year there were 57 new titles (books and pamphlets) issued (in 253 volumes and pamphlets). As with braille, the big event was the Moon edition of “Your Guide to Decimal Money”, with shoppers’ conversion table, and we printed, and sent out free, 1,500 copies.

Training for the Future

A vital factor for blind boys and girls facing up to the rigours of post-school days, is the preparation needed for them to live as handicapped people in a sighted world.

Especially is this so for those young people who will find their future in the industrial or commercial life of the nation.

It was to provide this essential training that the RNIB opened its vocational assessment centre for blind adolescents at “Hethersett”, Reigate, in 1956 at the invitation of the Ministry of Education.

Each year, about 40 students (boys and girls) start a years’ course aimed at vocational guidance, social adjustment and continued general education.

Those leaving this year have made their contribution to the centre’s previous successes and 19 certificates were awarded in external examinations for G.C.E. and R.S.A., 1 gold and 5 bronze awards were given for Personal Survival in swimming, 9 silver, and 19 bronze medals from the Ballroom Dancing Association and 1 silver medal was achieved in the Duke of Edinburgh Award Scheme.

To the Future

In the development of its services since the last century, the Institute has constantly looked forward.

The scientific revolution of the twentieth century with its dramatic progress to an electronic “way of life” has been harnessed, albeit in small measure, to our own technical advancement.

Computerisation plays its dynamic part in our braille output, over a hundred blind people have become computer programmers and computer science material is being produced for blind Students.

This is the age of science, and the Institute will keep a continuing watch on how it can be harnessed for the training and achievements of the blind.

This progress story would not have been possible but for the devoted team work under the leadership of our Director-General, Mr J. C. Colligan, C.B.E. We offer to them our sincere appreciation and thanks for a job of work so well done on behalf of Britain’s blind.

You've a right to know where your money goes.

Every £1 the Royal National Institute for the Blind spends on services for the blind is divided approximately as follows.

Braille Printing and Special Apparatus. 21p.

Over ½ million braille magazines and periodicals distributed each year as well as 100,000 bound books. Over 300 aids including the Rain Warning Device which tells a blind housewife when her washing's getting wet.

Training and Rehabilitation. 20p.

As well as providing vocational training, we offer employment schemes that help the newly-blind start a new career.

Residential and Holiday Homes. 9p.

Homes for the blind and deaf blind, and for those unable to return to a family environment. Holiday hotels too. At resorts like Scarborough, Blackpool and Hastings.

Nursery Homes and Schools. 21p.

Sunshine Homes and schools that care for and educate blind babies and children. Vocational training to prepare young people for society.

Talking Books. 16p.

This service has a membership of nearly 30,000. The main problems are handling more than 1 million requests for recordings every year as well as reducing the waiting list.

Capital Expenditure and other Payments. 11p.

We're constantly opening new schools, homes and training centres as well as keeping existing establishments up-to-date.

And less than 2p. on Central Administration

For all these services we need donations and legacies.
Please give generously.

ROYAL NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR THE BLIND

RNIB

By making a Deed of Covenant — you can — with a few strokes of your pen, help us to help Britains Blind of all ages. This ensures a regular Donation — takes only a few moments to complete — and increases the value of your subscription.

The Institute, being a Charity, is not liable to Income Tax, but you have to pay tax on the income out of which you pay your subscription. The Institute is allowed to recover the tax paid by you in relation to your subscription, but only if you have signed the seven-year covenant set out below. The following examples show how you can substantially increase the value of your contribution:

| Annual Subscription to be paid by subscriber | Income Tax (at 38.75 %), recoverable by Institute from Inland Revenue | Total value of subscription to the Institute |
|---|--|---|
| £ p | £ p | £ p |
| 1.00 | 0.63 | 1.63 |
| 2.00 | 1.27 | 3.27 |
| 5.00 | 3.16 | 8.16 |
| 10.00 | 6.33 | 16.33 |
| 20.00 | 12.65 | 32.65 |

In column 1 look for the amount of subscription you usually make. Let us take as an example £2. Column 3 shows the amount of gross income £3.27 you must receive to leave you with £2 after tax of 38.75% in the £ has been deducted from £3.27. Column 2, which is simply the difference between Columns 1 and 3, shows the amount of tax deducted £1.27 which the Institute can recover from the Inland Revenue, thereby increasing the value of your cash subscription of £2 to a total of £3.27.
